MISS GAULE CALLS SPIRITS FROM BEYOND THE RIVER.

Clammy Hands and Sepuichral Voices Introduced to Her Andience by the Obest Manufacturer—Wonn's Hall the Scene of a Spectral Scance.

There was more pressure of ghosts to the square inch in Wonn's Hall last night than ever surrounded even Madame Diss Debar for the edification of the celebrated lawyer, Luther R. Marsh, in New York City. They beld high carnival, too, and brought many endearing messages from the spirit land, and held lights enough in their hands to put a million candle power electric light to shame.

There were old-time ghosts, young ghosts, golden-haired ghests and darkeyed ghosts, baby ghosts and ghosts of youths and maidens that were summoned from the spirit land to talk with their earthly friends and bring them words of good cheer. The trouble of words of good cheer. The trouble of it was, however, that nobody could see or hear them but a young lady, who is pleased to call herself a materialist, named Miss Maggie Gaule. She spells her name g-a-u-le, because it looks better in print than the usual gross way of spelling it.

of spelling it.

Miss Gaule gave a test seance for the benefit of the Ladies' Ghostly Union and this was the occasion for the al-leged appearance of so many shadowy begin appearance of so many sharowy bodies from the other world. Fully twenty-five subdued-looking and aged people crowded themselves into the dimly-lighted little half and looked as if they were ready to see or hear any-thing that might be told them and throw up their hands in wonder and delight.

Miss Gaule, the ghost dealer, walked in about 9 o'clock and the air immedi-ately began to feel clammy. The Chivic reporter inadvertently turned his head, expecting to see a long, chilly ghost sitting beside him with elammy ands and sepulchral voice, but while the ghost manufacturer claimed that the room was full of them none were very distinct, even to the man with a very vivid imagination.

Her ghostly highness took a seat on a little platform clevated above the floor about a foot, on which stood three tables. She was a woman of peakelyle tables. She was a woman of probably 35 years of age, and rather comely. Her eyes were dark and shrewd-looking and her hair was jet black. A bottle of smelling salts hung pendant from a little chatelaine at her waist and across her breast was a tiny gold watch chain that encircled her neck. This was Miss Gaule, and according to her own statements, she can interview more zephyry spirits in a given space of time than probably any ghost dealer in America.

The ball was set rolling when a tall, angular-looking man stepped to the front of the platform. He wore a long, full, redish beard, and his eyes were sunken and lustreless. He said: "The scance will open by singing hymn three. Then the audience, in hollow voices, began to chant: voices, began to chant:

Come, gentle spirit to us now, Look on with tender eyes; Touch your soft hands upon each brow, Sweet spirit from the skies.

After this was concluded the man with the whiskers again spoke and said: "In order that the ghost may come to us without fear, it is necessary that the audience should keep perfectly quiet and lend all their sympathy to the medium.

The remark was decidedly uncalled for. Scarcely a sound could be heard except the hard breathing of two old gentlemen and an old lady, who sympathized with each other in an asthmatical sense. Then her ghostship arose. The reporter expected to see skeleton hands flying all about her head, but he didn't. Her voice was soft and sweet and she did not look any more like a person who dealt in spirits than any ordinary lady.

"Of course, I do not promise you anything," she began. "The ghosts of departed friends may come and give their names, and then again they may not. I will be honest with you, at all events. I give private cities. I give private sittings, under-street." stand, at -

stand, at — street.

Scargely had she concluded, when a ghost sprang up from the floor like a hariequin out of the trap-door of a stage. So the medium said, and stood stage. So the medium said, and stood beside a decrepit looking old man who appeared to be in his dotage. "Oh, isn't she beautiful," began the lady with the bitter sounding name. "It is a young woman. She has long, golden hair and she calls you father. She has hair and she calls you father. She has a bright light in her hand and one of a bright light in her hand and one of her arms is around your neck. Listen!" (Every lady listened, but there was not a sound.) "She speaks!" (Nobody heard her.) "She says, 'Father!' Oh, doesn't her face beam with pleasure. "Look!" (Everybody looks again, but there was not the faintest sign of a ghost!" Oh. Lean see her so plainly there was not the faintest sign of a ghost.)" Oh, I can see her so plainly. She says. 'Father, cheer up, I am ever near you. Do not be discouraged, I am here to guide you.' She wants to tell you something, but she does not like to do so in public. She wants to see you in private and tell you of something pertaining to your welfare. Now she fades away."

Miss Ganie looked around the room. Miss Gaule looked around the room for a moment, and finally selected an old lady that had three or four ghost standing around her, smoothing her bair, kissing her, and calling her endearing names. "Oh, they are so beautiful! One of them is a man in a miform, with badges on his breast, as if in his life he was a man of some prominence. See" (The reporter couldn't see a thing.) "He holds a name in his hand. It is so plain. It is Clarence. The others are beautiful girls. One has the name 'Maude' printed on a beautiful spirit flower. Oh, I can almost smell it!" (The reporter smelled escaping gas.) "There, in a bright light, held in the hand of third ghost, is the word 'Ger-

After going over a long rigmarole of pleasant messages, the lady, who sup-posed herself surrounded by ghosts, arose and said in a squeaky voice: "On, you have pleased me so much. It mentions the names of my departed

Another old lady beside her sprang up and said: "That was meant for me, The matter was referred to the ghost-dealer, and the last woman got the preference. The one who imagined hat her friends had called on her said: "It's just the same test that was given to me last time, anyway, and it mentions the name of my people, too." The discussion was cut short by the organ, which started up a hymn.

Few people pass the winter without a disagreeable cold in the head, and yet such a cold is easily broken up by Old Saul's Catarrh Cure, the best remedy for catarrh gan, which started up a hymn.

After a dozen ghosts had appeared to people, among whom was the ghost of "George Berlin," who wanted to tell his folks something on the quiet, the scance ended. It was peculiar that every other ghost wanted to have private chats with their earthly friends, but sould not talk in public. and influenza. 25 cents. Marriage licenses have been issued to George E. "Several years ago, on a passage better."

Darien, Conn.

"Several years ago, on a passage boine from California, by water, I contracted so severe a cold that for some days I was confined to my state-room, and a physician on beard considered my life in danger. Happening to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I used it freely, and my langs were soon restored to a healthy condition. Since then I have invariably recommended this preparation."—J. B. Chandler, Junction, Va.

The Death Record at the Health Office 4--It Expresses Emphatic

PNEUMONIA and LUNG TROUBLES.

The record of the Health Office for Januar 21 shows 61 deaths reported. Of these 13 were from PNEUMONIA, 5 from BRON CHITIS, 4 from CONGESTION of the LUNGS, 4 from CONSUMPTION. In two cases the GRIP was given as the cause of death and in one "LA GRIPPE PNEUMONIA" was re corded. The figures of the day before showed that over 50 per cent. of the deaths were caused by lung diseases.

This is a very large showing of mortality rom lung diseases, especially from the dangerous grip.

For the prevention of lung troubles of all kinds DOUGLASS' EMULSION is recom-mended, the timely use of which may avert a serious illness, i nothing worse. Donglass's Emulsion is made from Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypo-phosphites of Lime and Soda. It is very palatable and easily digested.

Douglass' Emulsion Is a specific for Weak Lungs, Bronchial Troubles and General Debility. Sufferers from "La Grippe" will find it will strengthen the Lungs, relieve the Soreness of the Chest and quickly cure the Cough resulting from the disease.
